

ABSTRACT

An abrasive pad including an abrasive surface and an elastomer material backing the abrasive surface and having an end remote from the abrasive surface. The elastomer material is formed with two slits starting at edges of the spongy material and oriented substantially 5 parallel to the abrasive surface near the remote end of the spongy material, such that flaps formed by the slits can be folded back to form a finger hold.